Important Movement in New Mexico.

of what I have written does not at all depend on the motives that actuate the writer.

Permit me to add a word or two for the calling of a convention for the purpose of forming a State Constitution, and to apply for admission into the Union at the next session of Congress. It has been called, and will take place in the Legislative Hall in that city the consideration. The next was the Democratic party, which no longer had a national existence, but like the old Whig party was broken up, one the Douglas, and the other the Brecknin man, possessed of an ample fund of common sense. I do not know how familiar he may be with the rules of orthography; but I adoubt upon the institutions of the South, was war upon the institutions of the South, and was therefore unworthy of our consideration. The next was the Democratic party, which no longer had a national existence, but like the old Whig party was broken up, one the Douglas, and the other the Breckning pain man, possessed of an ample fund of common sense. I do not know how familiar he may be with the rules of orthography; but I

Then it will come to be held, that a slave scaping into a Territory where slavery no onger exists, cannot be reclaimed, but is free longer exists, cannot be reclaimed, but is free—the Constitution requiring States only to give up such fugitives. If the people of a territory can abolish slavery, a slave taking refuge there is as free and safe as he would be in England; and so a Territory or province can effect that which a sovereign State cannot. Why will Southern men, blinded by their admiration of a man, not reflect on the logical consequences of his doctrine?

These are my opinions; and compelled by them, I regard it as a sacred duty to vote for no candidates who do not, at least in the main, avow them as their creed.

sand so I cannot choose but vote for them. It would not be true to say that I would as readily vote for Mr. Lincoln as for Mr. Douglas—A readily vote for Mr. Lincoln as for Mr. Douglas—A ready to say that, between the two societies, I would rather vote for the power of Congress to prohibit, than for the power of Congress to prohibit, than for the power of a Territorial Legislature to do so. Yet many true Southern men think the doctrine of Mr. Douglas sound and wise, and sufficient for the South. We shall bye and bye, I hope, convince them of their error; but in the meantime let us not be so unjust as to censure or repreach them, impeaching their motives or charging them with disloyalty.

My eyes rest next with affection and regard on the candidates presented by that political organization which inscribes on its banners these works: "The Constitution and regard on the candidates presented by that political organization which inscribes on its banners these works: "The Constitution, the Union, and the Enforcement of the Lanes."—That is the motto, thank God I of all parties and of almost all men, in this great Republic. Maintain the Constitution unimpaired, and who is there that wishes to see the Union dissolved. What honest man is not willing to see the laws, enacted in conformity to the Constitution, and all parties and some provinces: the equal rights of every State, every where, and not less in the Territories, which are their common estate, than the Constitution, and the Enforcement of the Lanes."—The constitution unimpaired, and who is there that wishes to see the Union dissolved. What honest man is not willing to see the laws, enacted in conformity to the Constitution, enforced and obeyed? All doctors of the second of t constitution, enforced and obeyed? All doctrines, of all shades, that have made themselves heard in our country, have claimed to spring from the Constitution; and all parties may swear allegiance to the flag that hears this motto, as Catholics and Protestants of every sect might to a banner inscribed with the device. "The Bible, Christianity, and the observance of the Moral Law."

John Bell and Edward Everett are names well worthy to be honored everywhere in this Republic. Illustrious alike by public services and private worth, both have served their country well and faithfully and honestly, and the latter more nobly than has fallen to the lot of many men, in all the loog ages of the world. As a statesman and man of letters, his reputation is co-extensive with christian civilization; and everywhere men name him only to do him bonor. It does not need that I should inquire into their personal opinions on the questions that now insist upon solution. I do not think they agree; but that is not important. For if they did, and how amply soever they conceded the rights of the Southern States and their citizens, it would still be true that we do not know that those who in the North compose the party that supports them, will be bound by their viewar or, if angessafel.

Celebrated Fe male Pills! true that we do not know that those who in the North compose the party that supports them, will be bound by their views; or, if successful that the party would concede and maintain what we regard as our undeniable rights. I think, speaking for myself alone, that the time has come when every man should speak out upon these questions; and I can vote only for those who dictinctly represent that creed which I embrace as mine, I must follow my convictions of duty, and for the time postpone nich i emploses a relation of duty, and for the time postpone a consideration of other questions.

If in doing so, I chance to find myself by

I shall not find it necessary to adopt as mine their delusions on that subject. I will stand by them while they vindicate the Constitution; believing with Mr. Breckinridge, that we can maintain the Union, only "by clinging with unfaltering fidelity, unmoved by ing with unfaltering fidelity, unmoved by policy, to the Constitution;" fidelity to which "in all its parts and in all its obligations, is the condition of the American Union, and of its perpetuation." If they assail that Constitution, or without ample cause march, shaking their spears, against the Union, there will be no obligation resting upon us to be their allies in that war.

A mind conscious of its own rectitude, will in mind conscious of its own recritude, will dily stoop to be angry at small provocations, may afford to smile at those who taint with being the followers of Mr. Yancy, if believe, as I do, that those who vote for Breckinridge will, whether he be or not sted, form for the future a compact phalanx rue men, upon which after a time, all the lidren of the South will rally; when, the tern away, the ugiy liniaments of Squatchildren of the South will rally; when, the veil torn away, the ugiy liniaments of Squatter Sovereignty will amaze and confound its decided followers, and Israel will again turn to his tents and altera, and no longer wander after strange Gods. Surely the Bouth will one day have but one faith and one creed; and then, standing radiant in her armor on the impregnable ramparts of the Constitution, she will dictate her own terms to a divided North, establish the truth, and preserve and perpetnate the Union.

Looking back along the path of my life, I see many things to regret, much done that I could wish had been left undone, much omitted that I could wish had been performed. But I am not sorry to have been a Whig and afterwards an American, by the side of so many gallant and true gentlemen; I am proud of it, and of the not unmanly or ungenerous course that I pursued on the field

RICHLAND, August -EDITOR MISSISSIPPIAN :- On Saturday last Mr. Amos R. than I was yesterday; and I hope to be wiser to-morrow than I am to-day. My judgment is more mature, and my opinions, I hope, more securately formed, than when I was some years younger. Some I have changed, and others have developed themselves and expanded; but in the main I think I stand where I Mr. Johnston wished to impress it upon always did. If my motives are impunged and unworthy ones sought to be assigned for my present action, I shall remain entirely silent; for I am less than nothing in this present great exigency of the country, and the value of what I have written does not at all depend that such a state of things was almost without a parallel in the history of our country.— There were four candidates in the field for the Presidency. There was a Black Republican candidate, nominated by a 'sectional party' on a "sectional platform," and the object of

I am sure that he has never been in the least degree responsible, even by approval, for the removal from office of the friend of Mr. Douglas—a course, indeed, in taking which the President is far more likely to do him injury than service.

When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and angerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.
